Rather, it was first suggested as a part of the October Agenda issued by political opponents of President Sánchez de Lozada within days of forcing his resignation.

167. President Sánchez de Lozada is without sufficient knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations in Paragraph 167, and on that basis denies those allegations.

168. President Sánchez de Lozada denies any implication that these were authorized and proper legal actions.

To the extent a response is required, President Sánchez de Lozada denies that there was any legitimate trial or judgment. President Sánchez de Lozada further states that the trial was politically motivated and lacked the most basic procedural safeguards, and that the verdicts do not carry any weight as to whether any laws were violated in September and October 2003. Denied as to the remainder of the allegations in Paragraph 170.

171. Admitted that Defendants live in the United States and that Bolivian law does not permit trials in absentia. 175. Admitted that in November 2008, the Bolivian government enacted legislation entitled “Law for the Victims of the Events of February, September, and October of 2003,” known as Law No. 3955. Denied that Paragraph 175 provides an accurate recitation of the entire law.

176. Paragraph 176 is not an allegation directed at President Sánchez de Lozada and therefore no response is required. To the extent a response is required, President Sánchez de Lozada admits the allegations in Paragraph 176.

177. President Sánchez de Lozada admits that Law No. 3955 was enacted by the Bolivian government. Denied that Paragraph 177 provides an accurate recitation of the entire law. President Sánchez de Lozada further denies any implication that Bolivian law can affect the exhaustion requirement of the TVPA.

178. President Sánchez de Lozada denies the implication that he has caused harm to Plaintiffs. President Sánchez de Lozada admits that there is no judgment against him in any court of law and that he has not paid any money to Plaintiffs nor had any legal obligation to do so.

AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

President Sánchez de Lozada sets forth the following defenses. President Sánchez de Lozada does not intend hereby to assume the burden of proof with respect to those matters as to which, pursuant to law, the Plaintiffs bear the burden. President Sánchez de Lozada reserves the right to amend or add additional affirmative defenses upon further investigation and discovery.

First Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred because any alleged acts or omissions of President Sánchez de Lozada were taken as a necessary and proportional response to violent protests—a response that the United States Government has stated was commensurate to the threat posed by protestors.

Second Affirmative Defense

This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims because the allegations contained in the Complaint do not constitute extrajudicial killings as defined by United States courts, the Law of Nations, or any treaty of the United States.

Third Affirmative Defense

This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over TVPA and wrongful death claims because Plaintiffs have already received adequate compensation for their injuries pursuant to at least two Bolivian governmental schemes, the 2003 Humanitarian Assistance Agreement and the 2008 Law for the Victims of the Events of February, September, and October of 2003.

Fourth Affirmative Defense

This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs' TVPA claim because Plaintiffs have failed to exhaust available remedies in Bolivia, including civil claims in the Bolivian court system.

Fifth Affirmative Defense

This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs' wrongful death claim, whether pled under Bolivia or Florida law, because it raises novel and complex issues of foreign law.

Sixth Affirmative Defense

This Court lacks subject matter over Plaintiffs' wrongful death claim, and Plaintiffs could not state a claim for wrongful death under Florida law, because the alleged conduct was not intended to have a substantial effect within the state of Florida, nor is Plaintiffs' claim for wrongful death a matter of universal concern recognized by the community of nations.

Seventh Affirmative Defense

This Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs' wrongful death claim under Florida law because it raises novel and complex issues of state law, including whether state tort law should adjudicate liability as between citizens of a foreign state and a former official of a foreign government.

Eighth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' claim for wrongful death is barred by Bolivia's statute of limitations because it is a civil tort claim, which has a three-year statute of limitations.

Ninth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred by the political question doctrine because the claims pose non-justiciable political questions that this Court does not have the jurisdiction to decide.

Tenth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred by the act-of-state doctrine because they concern an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.

Eleventh Affirmative Defense

President Sánchez de Lozada is immune from Plaintiffs' claims.

Twelfth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are un-triable due to the unavailability of critical witnesses and evidence. The political persecution faced by President Sánchez de Lozada from the current government of Bolivia, as well as the delay and uncertainty associated with the letters rogatory process because Bolivia is not a signatory to the Hague Convention, deny President Sánchez de Lozada due process of law and the right to produce competent evidence in his defense.

Thirteenth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred by due process principles, because President Sánchez de Lozada lacked fair notice that the theories of liability relied on by Plaintiffs—including the theory of command responsibility—imposed liability for the alleged conduct at issue.

Fourteenth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred under Rule 19 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for failure to join all necessary and indispensable parties, including (a) Evo Morales and Felipe Quispe, who incited and exploited the violent civil unrest in September and October 2003 to promote their agenda, resulting in the deaths of Plaintiffs' decedents, by, among other things, leading an insurgency to overthrow the democratically-elected government of Bolivia and directing their followers to block roads and critically needed supplies from reaching civilian populations, hold tourists hostage, fire upon government personnel, and attack municipal buildings with Molotov cocktails and dynamite; and (b) the individuals who allegedly perpetrated the acts of which Plaintiffs complain.

Fifteenth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred under Rule 19 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for failure to join all other persons who may be entitled by applicable law to damages by reason of the decedents' deaths.

Sixteenth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred to the extent that any Plaintiffs or anyone else has brought any other action for damages related to the alleged decedents' deaths.

Seventeenth Affirmative Defense

Any damages allegedly suffered by Plaintiffs were directly and proximately caused by the superseding, intervening acts, or omissions of other persons over whom President Sánchez de Lozada had no control and for whose acts or omissions President Sánchez de Lozada is neither responsible nor liable.

Eighteenth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' TVPA and wrongful death claims are barred because President Sánchez de Lozada cannot be held vicariously liable for the acts of the individuals who allegedly perpetrated the acts of which Plaintiffs complain.

Nineteenth Affirmative Defense

An award of punitive damages against President Sánchez de Lozada would be unconstitutional and in violation of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution.

Twentieth Affirmative Defense

Assuming for the purpose of asserting this defense only that the individuals alleged to have killed Plaintiffs' decedents were agents of President Sánchez de Lozada, such persons were acting outside the scope of their supposed agency.

Twenty-First Affirmative Defense

President Sánchez de Lozada did not hire, select, retain, or employ the individuals who are alleged to have killed Plaintiffs' decedents.

Twenty-Second Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' claims are barred because any alleged acts or omissions of President Sánchez de Lozada were taken out of necessity or under duress.

Twenty-Third Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' claims are barred by equitable estoppel. Plaintiffs have already received adequate compensation for their injuries pursuant to at least two Bolivian governmental schemes, the 2003 Humanitarian Assistance Agreement and the 2008 Law for the Victims of the Events of February, September, and October of 2003, and are seeking additional compensation in Bolivia.

Twenty-Fourth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs' claims for punitive and exemplary damages are barred insofar as Plaintiffs seek to hold President Sánchez de Lozada vicariously liable for any act or decision of another person.

Twenty-Fifth Affirmative Defense

Plaintiffs fail to state a claim for which relief can be granted.

Twenty-Sixth Affirmative Defense

President Sánchez de Lozada reserves the right to assert further defenses as they become known or apparent in the course of these proceedings.

WHEREFORE, President Sánchez de Lozada requests judgment against Plaintiffs on the Complaint and an award of attorneys' fees and costs expended herein to the extent permitted by law, along with such other relief as the Court deems just and proper.
